Where the Coalition manifestos converge

The new Coalition Government of Conservatives and Liberal Democrats has already agreed to present an emergency Budget within 50 days, a Departmental spending review in the autumn and on a veto on new runways at Heathrow, Gatwick or Stansted. With culture as yet on the back-burner, The Heritage Alliance will upload links to appointments and Departmental programmes to its website www.theheritagealliance.org.uk as soon as they are published.

Looking at their manifestos in more detail reveals areas of consensus of heritage policy. Both support continuing free entry to museums and changes to the National Lottery that would increase its funds, although in different ways. Both would tackle the confusion between greenfield and brownfield sites.

The Coalition has agreed that the British Government will be a positive participant in the European Union and defend the UK's national interests in the forthcoming EU budget negotiations. In this context, both manifestos support reform to agricultural subsidies to protect the environment. The Conservatives specifically support a Heritage Bill, while the Lib Dems, although known to be sympathetic, did not mention it in their manifesto. The Lib Dems would equalise VAT on new build and repair on an overall revenue-neutral basis to reduce the costs of repairs to historic buildings. This dream seems unlikely in the present climate, with changes to VAT and other taxes likely to be unveiled in the emergency Budget but concessions could be made. Although they have come to an agreement over nuclear construction, it is difficult to see how they will resolve different approaches to reforming the planning system. The Alliance welcomes new Cabinet appointments

Conservative Jeremy Hunt MP is Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport (COMS). Elected MP for South West Surrey in May 2005, he was formerly Shadow Culture Secretary (2007-2010) and Shadow Minister for Disabled People (2005 - 2007). Before his election as MP Mr Hunt ran his own educational publishing business, Hotcourses. Commenting on his appointment, Mr Hunt said: "I am very pleased to have been appointed as the new Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport. It is a wonderful moment for me personally, having followed this portfolio for the last two and a half years. Our sectors – particularly creative industries, culture and tourism – are vital elements in the UK's economic recovery. And the successful delivery of the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games in London gives us a once-in-a-lifetime chance to showcase the country to the world in what will, quite literally, be the greatest show on Earth."

His Conservative colleague Caroline Spelman is appointed Secretary of State for Environment, Farming and Rural Affairs, and Eric Pickles is appointed Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government. Chris Huhne, formerly Lib Dem environment spokesman, takes the Department for Energy and Climate Change. The Conservative MP Francis Maude, who has Cabinet-level responsibility for the third sector, will set out the Coalition Government's policy for funding the sector at a special national conference on 9 June.

The Alliance has already written to Jeremy Hunt welcoming his appointment and reminding him of the commitment he made at its March meeting to inter-Departmental meetings at Ministerial level (DCMS / COMS, DEFRA and CLG) to help co-ordinate heritage policies more effectively. As Chair of The Heritage Alliance and of the Churches Conservation Trust, Loyd Grossman is also writing to the new Prime Minister alerting him to the value of the Listed Places of Worship Grant Scheme in regenerating rural and urban community life. Scottish Historic Environment Amendment Bill introduced to Holyrood

Scottish Culture and External Affairs Minister Fiona Hyslop introduced the Historic Environment Amendment Bill (Scotland) 2010 to the Scottish Parliament last week.

The Bill, published on 5 May, amends provisions in the existing Listed Building and Conservation Areas (Scotland) Act 1997, the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979 and the Historic Buildings and Ancient Monuments Act 1953. It aims to harmonise aspects of the listing and scheduling systems and align these systems more closely with Scotland's modernised planning regime; Improve the ability of central and local Government to work with developers and other partners; Improve the capacity to deal with urgent threats and increase the efficiency and effectiveness of deterrents; and help to ensure that Historic Scotland is able to meet the expectations of visitors in the 21st century

A draft of the Bill went out to consultation between May and August 2009 with responses coming from a variety of heritage, conservation and planning bodies supporting the changes. Dr Simon Gilmour, who lead on the Bill within the umbrella body BEFS (Built Environment Forum Scotland), said: "members of BEFS strongly endorse the provisions set out in the Bill, which will strengthen the ability to effectively and sustainably manage our heritage. It will simplify processes without weakening controls, and close some loopholes that presently allow unacceptable threats to the historic environment."

The Bill can be found at <http://www.scottish.parliament.uk/s3/bills/43-HistoricEnvironment/index.htm> Further information on the economic contribution of the historic environment in Scotland can be found at www.historic-scotland.gov.uk/1409_heacs.pdf Back

VAT: up, down or special pleading?

Even the Archbishop of Canterbury was unable to secure assurance from the former Prime Minister over the future of the Listed Places of Worship Grant scheme beyond 2011. Gordon Brown's reply of 27 April declared: "I know how important the LPOWGS scheme has been and very much share your commitment to ensuring that our churches can continue to play their pivotal role at the centre of so many communities right across the UK". But he would not make any commitment until the forthcoming spending review has concluded. Since 2001, the grant scheme has reimbursed congregations of all faiths for VAT incurred on the repair and maintenance of listed places of worship by over £100million and attracted four times that amount to the benefit of community projects. But the change in VAT rules at European level in 2009 did not include the option for a lower rate on repairs and maintenance of cultural assets. The Heritage Alliance is campaigning hard for the scheme's retention; see the Places of Worship campaign library. And with the General Election purdah period now over the LPOWGS petition has re-opened for new signatures; please take the time to add yours, it only takes a minute! Visit <http://petitions.number10.gov.uk/VAT-refundscheme>

In a separate initiative, with the future rate of all UK VAT under debate, The Heritage Alliance was one of the signatories in the letter to The Times on 16 April from the Cut the VAT Coalition, calling for a reduced rate of VAT on home improvement works: "The UK's existing homes contribute 27% to our total carbon emissions. We need urgent action to cut carbon emissions by 80% by 2050. It would help conserve our historic environment and counter the incentive to build on greenbelt land instead of renovating existing property". Back

Heritage Open Days 2009 clocks up over one million visits

This year's evaluation of Heritage Open Days reports the "most successful event in the fifteen year history of England's annual celebration of local architecture, history and culture". A record 4100 properties and events attracted over one million visits over four days.

New regional hotspots emerged, such as Brighton & Hove, Oxford and Cambridge; although the most active region remains the South East, which contributes over a quarter of the national programme. Roughly a third of properties taking part were religious buildings, but the range continued to grow reflecting the diversity of local communities' heritage.

Of the properties opening up for Heritage Open Days, 45 per cent were not usually accessible to the public, 15 per cent waived their admission fees and 40 per cent usually opened free of charge. 1443 organisers registered a total of 4100 approved events. Organisers and volunteers spent around 655,000 working hours to make HODs happen, which equated to a staggering in-kind value of £3,799,000.

Discovering Places Open Weekend: register now

The London 2012 Cultural Olympiad project Discovering Places, delivered by The Heritage Alliance, will launch over the weekend of 23 - 25 July. The project aims to inspire the people of the UK to discover their local environment – with all its hidden places, extraordinary spaces and the stories they have to tell. Find out more about the project on our website <http://www.theheritagealliance.org.uk/discovering-places-2012-cultural-olympiad>

Discovering Places will launch over Open Weekend, the Cultural Olympiad's annual UK-wide celebration that marks the count down to the Olympic and Paralympic Games www.london2012.com/openweekend. Through a series of activities and events over this weekend, Discovering Places will bring the natural, historic and built environment to the fore. Want to get involved? The Alliance would welcome you to register your event to be part of the DP launch weekend if it is a/ free at the point of access, b/ is actively engaged in either the natural, built and / or historic environments, and c/ meets the Open Weekend "challenge" theme – where the event provides its audience with a challenging opportunity to try something new, or take an existing skill to a new level. Using the UK's interest and awareness of the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games to reach new audiences, your event will be a part of the Open Weekend media and PR campaign and marketing materials and support will also be available.

To register your event fill out the Open Weekend registration form. If your event meets the above Discovering Places qualification, please tick the Discovering Places box on the form. The DP team will then be in touch with you within 10 days of registering to progress your application. Back

DCMS publishes revised guidance on scheduled monuments and listed buildings

What used to be the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) (now Department for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport) recently published a revised policy statement on scheduled monuments in England, which sets out policies relating to the identification, protection, conservation and investigation of England's premier archaeological sites under the provisions of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979; including through the designation of scheduled monuments and the determination of applications for scheduled monument consent. The revised document brings the guidance in line with PPS5 and reflects the new arrangements for the duties devolved to English Heritage: see <http://www.culture.gov.uk/images/publications/ScheduledMonuments.pdf>.

A revised version of DCMS's Principles of Selection for Listed Buildings has also been issued, which sets out the general principles the Secretary of State applies when deciding whether a building is of special architectural or historic interest and should be added to the list of buildings compiled under the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990.

The Alliance welcomes new member: TACS

The Heritage Alliance welcomes warmly another new member this month, the Tiles and Architectural Ceramics Society (TACS). Since 1981 TACS has served the study and protection of tiles and architectural ceramics, uniting people with common interests in these areas. Its international membership of individuals and institutions is drawn from across the heritage sector, museums, conservation, manufacturing (both industrial and craft) architecture, design and antiques. For more information on TACS visit <http://www.tilesoc.org.uk/index.htm> For more information on becoming a member of The Heritage Alliance visit www.theheritagealliance.org.uk/become-a-member or email Emma Robinson. The Alliance's Advocacy Groups: 2010 plans

The Heritage Alliance's four advocacy groups have a busy schedule of meetings, events and campaigning planned for 2010. What have they been up to so far this year?

The Inclusion Advocacy Group held its first meeting of the year in February, where members discussed ongoing projects and set the wheels in motion for drafting the group's manifesto and planning the summer policy event. The next meeting takes place on Wednesday (19 May), where amongst other agenda items members will confirm the final manifesto copy and policy day programme. Once produced, the manifesto and policy day programme will be available on The Alliance's website and the link will be noted in Update. The Spatial Planning Advocacy Group also held its first meeting of the year in February, along with the Joint Committee of National Amenity Societies, where members discussed hot issues such as The Penfold Review of non-planning consents (see The Alliance's response here) and the forthcoming PPS15 (published as PPS5) and Vision Statement. The Alliance's HPR co-ordinator Karen Bewick also updated the group on her work on Heritage Protection Reform. At its next meeting on Monday (17 May), amongst other agenda items the group will discuss its post-election HPR strategy and drafting of its advocacy statement.

The Funding Advocacy Group met in April to discuss plans for running a fundraising skills seminar pilot in the Autumn in partnership with HLF, to review the Heritage Funding Directory and to assess the major risks to heritage funding with a view to hosting a fuller discussion at the post-election meeting (17 June). The Alliance's newest Advocacy Group, on Rural Heritage, was established this year and will hold its first meeting on 17 June. The RHAG will focus specifically on CAP reform post 2013 and other policies that impact upon the management of the rural historic environment. So far this year, RHAG has published a briefing note on CAP reform <http://www.heritagelink.org.uk/2010/03/29/cap-and-the-historic-environment> and RHAG members attended a Europa Nostra meeting in Brussels in March to discuss Europe-wide and member state based lobbying on CAP reform throughout 2010. Progress on this and further actions will be discussed at the meeting on 17 June.

Planning - Shaping the Future: Royal Town Planning Institute launches its manifesto

The RTPI, the professional body that represents 22,000 town and country planners, has launched its manifesto for the future of planning entitled Planning – Shaping the Future. The document sets out a clear vision for a planning system that is effective, responsive and fit for purpose and argues that planning is one of the essential mechanisms through which many of the Government's key objectives can be delivered. The Institute calls on the Government to "take a serious look at how we plan for the future, arguing that strategic planning at the international, national and sub-national levels, through an integrated and genuinely spatial approach, is vital to ensure that the needs of the wider than local community interest are properly addressed." The National Trust's Going Local strategy in practise: change is afoot

In a recent letter to stakeholders, Director General of The National Trust (a member of The Heritage Alliance) Dame Fiona Reynolds outlined details of the changes that are taking place within the organisation, following publication of its "cultural revolution" in the form of the Going Local strategy, reported in Update 179 in February. At the centre of the new strategy is the concept of Trust properties functioning as community spaces, to involve local residents more in the daily life of the properties and widen the Trust's appeal to new audiences by making the organisation more relevant and accessible to everyone. The aim is to raise membership from its current record of almost 3.8 million to 5 million, by 2020. The organisational changes underway to achieve this have begun with changes at property level - "giving our Property and General Managers more autonomy to make decisions and more control over their budgets" – followed by two principal changes at central and regional levels; firstly the creation of a new National Trust 'consultancy' where specialist staff will offer their services directly to properties, and secondly the streamlining of the Trust's regional structures, from the current model of nine English regions and two countries, down to six

English regions plus the two countries. To achieve this three new English regions will be created: the Midlands (merging the East and West Midlands), the South East (merging the Thames and Solent region with our former South East region) and the South West (merging Wessex with Devon and Cornwall). Detailed design of the Trust's new organisational structure is currently underway, with a target for completion of all changes by the end of 2010.

PRT's Green Guide for Historic Buildings launched at sector reception in London

The Prince's Regeneration Trust (PRT - a member of The Heritage Alliance) launched its Green Guide for Historic Buildings on 22 April, at an evening reception in London. The practical guide aims to help those who own and/or work on listed and other historic buildings make successful environmental adaptations whilst retaining the historic character of the building. BBC History presenter Dan Snow hosted the launch event, which was attended by over 70 colleagues from the heritage, property and environmental sectors and the PRT team. In his speech Dan highlighted the great, untapped potential of our historic building stock to contribute to a more energy efficient future: "The Prince's Regeneration Trust and I share an absolute passion for the built historic environment. These buildings can compete in the modern world with any other kind of building in terms of energy efficiency and the Green Guide will tell you how." As the Guide indicates, the measures required to 'green' a building needn't be invasive and expensive; often small and simple changes can have a significant impact, whilst retaining the special character of the building, as Ros Kerslake, Chief Executive, of PRT said: It makes no sense to affect the character of the building by introducing solar or photovoltaic panels if the hot water tank, pipes, floor and roof are inadequately insulated, the windows and doors are ill-fitting or the occupants leave all the lights on...managing the way people within the building consume energy is also a crucial, yet achievable, task."

Hard copies of the Green Guide for Historic Buildings can be purchased online here - <http://www.tsoshop.co.uk/bookstore.asp?FO=1159966&Action=Book&ProductID=9780117068445&From=SearchResults> For more information, visit <http://www.princes-regeneration.org/news.php?id=49> Back

NCVO Civil Society Almanack published

An annual staple of the charitable sector, NCVO's UK Civil Society Almanack published on 21 April shows the sector was in a sound financial position as it entered the recession. Next year's Almanac will reflect the sector's situation during the worst of the recession.

Civil society here includes voluntary organisations as well as other groups such as universities, housing associations and faith groups. The new data shows government spending on the voluntary sector accounts for 2% of the overall national budget. However, it also shows that three-quarters of charities receive no government funding at all and that income from individuals remains the single most important funding stream for the entire voluntary sector, accounting for £13.1 billion (37%) of its total £35.5 billion annual income. A total of 38,000 charities (22%) do receive government money and of those, 23,000 receive more than half their funding in this way, with organisations that provide employment and training opportunities receive the largest proportion of their income from government. Other sub-sectors that receive a substantial proportion of income from government include education (51%), law and advocacy (51%), social services (50%) and housing (50%).

Large charities, with an income of between £1 million and £10 million and which represent 2.4% of the sector, receive 38% of their income from government. By contrast, micro charities - those with an income of less than £10,000, which represent 53.2% of the sector - receive just 5% of their income from government. The Almanack finds that UK Civil Society organisations employ an estimated 1.6 million people, which represents 5.6% of the total UK workforce, a similar size to the NHS, which employs 1.4 million people. Voluntary organisations employ 668,000 people and account for one third (32%) of the civil society workforce. This equates to two people in every hundred in the total UK workforce. Between 1999 and 2008 the voluntary sector workforce increased by 23% (124,000 people). The public sector grew by 18% and the private by 7% in this period.

The Almanac is free to all full NCVO members. Other organisations can purchase a copy via the website: www.ncvo-vol.org.uk/almanac Back

CulturEuro Seminars: helping you access EU funds

European & International Information Services for Arts and Culture (EUCLID), the body that provides international information and consultancy services for the cultural sector, will be running a series of workshops across the UK over the summer with the aim of advising heritage and cultural organisations on how they can best apply for EU funds, and how they can find out about the other EU funding opportunities available to the sector. 75% of UK applications to the last call for the EU Culture programme were successful. See <http://www.cultureuro.info>. Seminars are taking place in Cardiff on 18 May; Norwich on 3 June; Leeds on 8 June; Liverpool on 10 June; Belfast on 15 June; Newcastle on 22 June and Nottingham on 24 June. Seminars will run from 1.30pm to 4.30pm, and the cost is £78 (no VAT). For full information and booking details, visit www.cultureuro.info. Back

Volunteers' Week – share your story?

The Heritage Alliance is a member of Volunteering England, the volunteer development agency, which runs Volunteers' Week this year from 1-7 June. It is now looking for people with inspiring volunteering stories to tell during Volunteers' Week. All stories are welcome; please let VE know about anyone you think has an interesting volunteering story. It may be about a project they have run, an incredible career change or just a volunteer who is a great role model in their local community. VE would especially like to hear from adults who volunteer with young people, as this year its media campaign will be calling for more adult volunteers to facilitate young people's activities. Email your stories to kimberley.rowley@volunteeringengland.org. Archaeology in Education conference 2010: call for papers

The Higher Education Academy's Subject Centre for History, Classics and Archaeology and the Council for British Archaeology have joined together to host a joint conference on Archaeology in Education, taking place on 13 / 14 September at the University of Liverpool. The organisers are now inviting conference proposals that address aspects of teaching archaeology at any educational levels from Key Stage 1 through to PhD, and in any context from the vocational to the professional. Conference proposals might be for either formally delivered papers, or a proposal to host a workshop based around a specific issue for discussion or activities. In particular the organisers would like to see proposals that focus on teaching and learning issues and how they can be addressed, and/or case study examples of specific learning. To make a proposal, send your name and affiliation (if any), the title of your paper or workshop and an abstract of 100 words to: archea@liverpool.ac.uk Back

New Churches Conservation Adviser for The Victorian Society

The Victorian Society (a member of The Heritage Alliance) has announced the appointment of a new Conservation Adviser with special responsibility for historic places of worship, Edmund Harris. Edmund, who comes from SAVE Britain's Heritage, will be responsible for all ecclesiastical casework across England and Wales. This marks a change in approach for the Society, as for the last year church casework has been split between the society's three caseworkers. "We are delighted to welcome Edmund," said Dr Ian Dungavell, Director of the Victorian Society, "He has an extensive knowledge of churches and chapels of all denominations and will be a great addition to the team at the Victorian Society as we campaign to save the best of our Victorian and Edwardian heritage for future generations." London's historic gardens unlock their gates for Open Garden Squares Weekend

On the weekend of 12/13 June, more than 120 private gardens and squares across London will open up to the public as part of the London Parks and Gardens Trust's Open Garden Square Weekend, sponsored by Transport for London. Visitors from all over London and far beyond will have the rare chance to explore an array of inspirational historic gardens that are not usually open to the public; from renowned roof gardens, to cemeteries and working allotments. These include Little Abbey - part of Peabody's historic Abbey Orchard site, which stands near Westminster Abbey; Hillview - a Victorian housing estate that has been transformed into a green haven for the community; and Sir John Cass's Foundation Primary School on the edge of Whitechapel, which will be inviting 'grow your own' enthusiasts to be inspired by its containerised roof garden. Ticket prices will be £7.50 in advance and £9 if bought during the weekend. The closing date for advance bookings is Monday 7 June 2010. For more information on the gardens that will be open, and to book, visit www.opensquares.org and www.capitalgardens.co.uk Back

UK Landscape Award 2010: apply now

The European Landscape Convention (ELC) is dedicated to the protection, management and planning of landscapes across Europe. It aims to encourage the integration of landscape into all relevant areas of policy, including cultural, economic and social policies. The ELC established its Council of Europe Landscape Award last year to recognise quality stewardship of landscapes; with member states running competitions to identify national winners, which are then put forward to the European Level competition. 2010 is the first year the Award will be run in the UK, and entrance is now open for applications. British Library: Promoting good handling of library and archive collections, 17 May

This training day is aimed at library and archive staff with responsibility for writing, implementing or promoting handling and use policies. The day communicates the role of good handling practices in the preservation of library and archive collections, outlines methods of promoting good handling practices within organisations and to users, and provides information that supports library and archive staff with the implementation of handling policies. It is led by Jane Pimlott and Sarah Hamlyn of the British Library. Cost is £95 + VAT (including lunch and refreshments). For full programme details and to book, visit www.bl.uk/blpac/handling.html 17 May 2010, British Library Centre for Conservation, 96 Euston Road, London NW1 2DB.

North of England Civic Trust (NECT): Principles of Conservation, 19 May

This free evening lecture, organised by NECT as part of the Heritage Skills Initiative, will focus on the principles of conservation and why the “why” is more important than the “how” in approaching intervention in historic buildings. Speaker Alan Gardner is a lecturer, chartered surveyor and a SPAB Lethaby Scholar and the lecture will be of interest to those who work, or aspire to work, in the historic environment and particularly useful to students wishing to enter the sector. The lecture is free of charge. Anyone interested in attending please email Skills@nect.org.uk to find out more and to book a place – with your name, email address and a contact number.

Historic Towns Forum: The role of retail development in economic regeneration and its impact on historic city centres, 27 May

There are a number of impacts made by large retail developments that must be carefully balanced, and impacts are magnified in historic towns and cities that may have particularly sensitive environments. Economic regeneration must be balanced with local distinctiveness and local trade. This event will explore how the Local Authority / Developer partnership, with a significant investment in the public realm, has underpinned regeneration in Cardiff. The issues will be examined together with analysis of the St David’s 2 case study. There will be speakers from HTF, Land Securities, CADW, Cardiff Council, Turley Associates and Powell Dobson Architects and the conference will carry CPD certification. Prices start at £35. For further details and to book visit http://www.historictownsforum.org/bkg_cardiff10?utm_source=newsletter Land Securities plc, St David’s Dewi Sant Centre Management offices, 2nd Floor, Eastside, St David’s Dewi Sant, Cardiff, CF10 2DB.
